Written by Tina Sobti
Tuesday, 24 April 2012 07:16

God created love to fill bliss and beauty in every person every being's life, but today you'll find every second relationship being broken because of the betrayal factor. Nowadays, very few people are found loyal, I wonder why do people just keep hopping partners, they fail to realize or don't even ruminate about the gloom they are leaving for the other person, how difficult it becomes for someone to live without a person whom they had loved truly and unconditionally. I have met a lot of people who are still waiting for the person they loved to come back in their life, they pretend that they are fine, but when you look deep into their eyes, you will find loneliness. Our eyes are the mirror of our soul, so when you look into somebody's eyes and feel that there is loneliness, it means that the person is not happy within, no matter how chirpy and happy he looks or behaves. I have written a lot of articles on love and relationships, but maybe angels through me are asking you all, everyone who's reading this, where has love vanished in today's world, why are people being so insensitive towards feelings, compassion has almost gone from their heart. I would really appreciate if you can spend few moments to share your views on the betrayal factor in a relationship, do you think a person should wait for his love to come back or should just move on. Please share your views in the comments box given below. I thank you in advance for your contribution. Love and Light to all the readers.